thing has to be done, it's as good as done, two years ago.

promises at the enemy would not be quite so effective as firing shell. The Annual also speaks of 800 Sikh Police being station ed here—about half that number would be nearer the mark. We are likewise teld that the Chipese are capital gunners, the inference being that the natives are of immense assistance to us in the defence of the Colony. Then there is a great deal of gush in the volume about what was done during the late Russian score-how 2,000 picked Chinese navvies were selected to form working parties, how powerful redoubts were thrown up on the island of Hongkong &c., all which must be somewhat amusing reading to these who know what actually did take place. The Naval Volunteer more ment also comes in for a word of commendation, and one cannot help remembering the brave corps which came to grief over a question of flaps or no flaps for their unmentionables. But in all seriousness, it is a disgrace that the guns for our defence have not been sent us by the Home authorities. We are not of course the only coaling station in a semi-defenceless condition. Singapore, by adopting the policy of the importunate widow, has obtained a considerable portion of her armaments, but Colombo seems to be in as bad a way as Hongkong. In a recent issue of the Times of Ceylon we find a paragraph which applies so directly to Hongkong that we give it in full :- A correspondent asks us when the gons for the new batteries are to arrive? This is a conundrum which we are perfeetly certain the Military authorities themsalves could not answer, and, if application were made to the War Office at home, we should not be surprised if the same ignorance were displayed. It is now more than three years since it was decided to fortify Colombo with something better than poppons, the Secretary of State's despatch being dated May, 1886, and, though the batteries are as far forward as they can be before the guns arrive, it is problematical whather the latter are cast yet. The colony has done its share of the work. It has built the batteries, or at all events it has provided the money for them, but the guns of modern pattern" which were to be provided by the Imperial Government are not yet forthcoming. It might, therefore, be as well if the attention of the Secretary of State were called to this matter through the Legislative Council; for, though we do not doubt that the local Military authorities have done all that in them lay to expedite matters, an agitation in the same direction from the public would greatly assist, we together satisfactory. The fire broke out in a photographer's shop, who was insured for $10,000. In his evidence the master of the shop gave a long list of articles which he said were in his shop at the time of the fire. Some of these were of such a nature that they could not have been totally consumed by the fire. Seeing that so much suspicion exists with regard to the origin of fires in Chinese houses, it was of cardinal importance that the debris should be examined to ascertain if the remains of these Skins, without any fear whatever of pro- articles were to be found. The master of the shop, one would have thought, would have been anxious to show these signs of the proof of his claim, and the insurance agent might be supposed to have an interest in enquiring into the matter. And if these parties took no steps, surely the police ought to have had the debris examined as material to the enquiry that was to take place. However, no one seems to have considered this examination important, and the result is that a chance of catablishing a genuinely accidental Chinese fire was lost. The inspection made yesterday was too late. The Inspector and the principal difference between them being Mr Naudin said that from the description of the contents given by the master of the shop one might have expected to find a good deal more among the debris than was to be seen yesterday, but no supervision had been exercised over the removal of the debris, and the mester said that everything of value ing of no remnants of the indestructible the accuracy or inaccuracy of the list of his stock given by the photographer. The failure on the part of the police to attend to this important matter seems to have arisen from s misunderstanding between the Magistrate and the inspector. As to the other parties, it is not for us to say whether they were right or wrong in the attitude they took. Mr Naudin, like most insurance egents, doubtless did not wish to show that he was inclined to dispute an insurance claim, more especially as he had some proof of the existence of the stock in a bill of sale held by Mr Musso, Still, we are inclined to endorse Mr Wodehouse's opinion that the ase revealed a somewhat reckless way of insuring -reckless at any rate when Chineso are the insured. We have so often lony fulfilled its part of the engagement, in this he reflects the general opinion of the return for which the guns were to be sent, colony. Whether the insurance offices will but the War Office anthorities seem to have take his good advice is snother things adopted the logic of Poohbah when he says They will doubtless wait until they have to the Mikado, 'If Your Majesty says a burned their fingers as severely as they did

THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

PARIS, Sept. 25th. The great majority of the organs of the 2 European press express satisfaction with the result of the general legislative elections in France.

PARIS, Sept. 25th. Two contradictory solutions have been s adopted by the commission revising votes with regard to General Boulanger and M. ... Dillon, who are deprived of their civil rights by the recent judgment of the High Court. In the Seine department the votes recorded for Boulanger have been considered null, and M. Joffrin, who obtained the highest number of votes after the General, was declared elected. In the Department of Morbiham, on the contrary, the votes has been declared elected.

A good deal of indignation has quite recently been expressed in regard to the powers given to these "officers' and the manner in which they perform what they are pleased to consider their duties. If the Opium Farmer's myrmidons were a body of civilised, educated, intelligent men, the powers given to them would have a chance at least of being prudently exercised, but it is quite another thing when a horde of low-class Chinese, Sikhs and Malays ar turned loose on the community with the right of search and arrest, and the cheering the haughty islanders of Achill, have susassurance that the more smuggled opium they can lay their hands on the greater their roward shall be. We can readily sympathise with the respectable Chinese merchant who resents being anceremoniously searched by an impudent and not over-cleanly 'excise officer, who, not opium is most likely to be found, simply adopts the plan of searching everybody. This kind of nuisance, which used to prevail to so large an extent on board the Canton steamers, has, we are glad to say, been to a great extent suppressed through the interference of the Steamboat Company, who found that the opium hunters were in the habit of constantly going beyond even the very sample powers which the law gives them. AECHDEACON Farrar's proposal for the establishment of a Church monastic order is now taking definite shape. The rules of an Order of St. James have been drafted and submitted to various dignitaries of the Church, and the idea seems to meet with the approval both of the Archbishop Canterbury and the Bishop of London. But it is difficult to believe that Protestant monks are among the chief wants of the age. Are laymen to infer that the monks who take the three-fold vow of poverty, swashbucklers who are known in this colony chastity, and obedience stand on a higher excise officers, and who are in the service platform than the ordinary clergyman The majority of our rectors, vicars, and curates are not overburdened with riches and they are usually credited with a will ness to lead godly lives and to obey their Bishops. Moreover, unless English churchmen have been wrongly instructed for the last few centuries, monasticism is distinctly a mistake-at any rate for men. Wi women perhaps it may be different.

co factories of the United Kingdom by the official analysts of the Board of Inland Revenue has thrown some light upon the tricks of this particular trade. One maker was detected in the act of cutting up brown paper with tobacco for cigarettes; another was found employing a solution of liquorice; a third had used an excess of alkaline salts in the grinding of shuff. Three others were caught using illegal preservatives, and several instances of excessive water in tobacco were discovered. Out of 166 samples of tobacco tested in the laboratory only aixty-eight proved to be genuine. Among the adulterated samples were several taken from a seizure of foreign cut tobacco and oigarettes, which were found to contain an admixture of coon-leaves. In this case it is charitably observed that the importer appeared to have been ignorant of the fact that the law of this country does not permit the sale of tobacco when mixed with the leaves of any other plant.

Graham explains that fear of his being great soa-fights of history. Admiral Baird, arrested and the refusal of the Railway

His story, when put together, is amazing, but credible. For three years Graham has peen preparing to achieve the ambition of his life. He has made several daring trips, culminating, on the date mentioned, in floating through the Rapids, being en route sucked into the Devil's Maelström. ween his feats Graham studied the Falls. and adapted his barrel-shaped float according to experience. Some of his barrels have been smashed occasionally, with animals enclosed in them:

The barrel used on the occasion referred to was made of Chinese locust-wood. was four and a-half feet long, and twentytwo inches in diameter, the top quickly swelling to twenty-seven inches and then tapering to fifteen. It was braced with irons outside, and fitted inside, with canvas straps and han l-holds, to leasen the shocks. It weighed a hundred and fifty nounds, and was ballasted with a hundred pounds of sand in bags. A drag, weighing twentyfive pounds, was attached by a fifty fee

Despite a safe experimental trip on the previous day to meet his wife's scruples, she refused her consent, and consequently Graham went without it. A manhole in the head of the barrel was battened at Obippewa Creek, on the Canadian side.

The red top of the barrel was frequently visible, but occasionally the drab sides, or disappearances, testified to the frightful tossing and twisting to which Graham was subected. In twenty-live minutes he was awapt over two bundred feet from the Canadian shore. Following the water down, instead of shooting out into the chasm, as he expected. he reappeared within two minutes, when the daring swimmer was dragged inshore, fifty minutes from the start.

The head of the barrel was smanhed in and Graham's neck at first appeared to be broken, but friction and whisky produced evidences of life. After his recovery from the shock it was found that he had suffered nothing worse than a few skin bruises. He gives the following account of the incidents

'I went down so quickly to the reef where the Horseshoe Rapids start that I measures that are being adopted by Chakir | was hardly prepared for the fall. > Antananarica, July 17.—The first appointed French Resident, M. le Myre de Villers, after holding the post at the Residency in Antananarivo for a period of three years and three months. has returned to his native country, a vonuger officer. M. has been despatched by the Republic to represent it in Madagascar. It is most important to note that this gentleman has been appointed Resident General only, and not Minister Plenipotentiary as his predecessor was. This may possibly be altered hereafter, but it certainly betokens a retreat, little by little, from the aggressive position hitherto regarded as the standpoint of the French Resident. It is evident that the expenses of the Residency establishment and Staff are being reduced, whilst the force at Diego Scarez is gradually dwindling away, and only the skeleton of a European garrison remains there, an extra expense, and absolutely of no use towards improving French trade with the island. In spite of sundry outpourings of national > indignation in the French local newspaper, Le Progrès de l'Imerina, cordial relations are, in reality, well preserved between the neighbouring European communities in Madagascar; and, meantime, I have ample means of knowing, for a fact, that the goodwill of the Malagasy towards the British residents, both mercantile and missionary s not a mere make-believe. As a proof of this. I may mention that, although the Prime Minister's favourite sou. Ramiharovony (otherwise Ramariavilo), was sent to France for instruction, the favourite grandson has now been sent to England in order to study English military methods and it is even contemplated to obtain permission for this young native noble (of we know not how many honours) to go through a course of training at the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich. It is interesting to note that large mercaptile transactions are in progress, under the auspices of the Hova nobility, who, hitherto accustomed to board their enormous stores of dollars in pits and tombs, are now beginning to appreciate the advantages of obtaining compound interest for their five-franc pieces. It is not unlikely that the Government may advise the Queen to issue a native coinage, stamped expressly on native gold, which is now being extracted in very appreciable quantities. The concessions made to foreigners are only allowed with due precaution, and the shrewd proprietors of estates, flocks and herds, plantations, and, it must also be added labour, are beginning to be wide swake as to the value of their possessions when develoned with European aid. Already a few establishments have been formed on the island. One sign of the good fimes coming is the presence of a small steamer on the river Ikiopa, which keeps up communication between Mojanga and Meyetanana. The owners are working gold diggings at Ampasiry, Imenavava, and the surrounding An English timber company has commen-
